

TERRA FABULA · CHAPTER 3

COMMUNITY

STORYTELLER: _____

Over many generations, the People made the land their home. They gathered food, raised families, and built places to live.

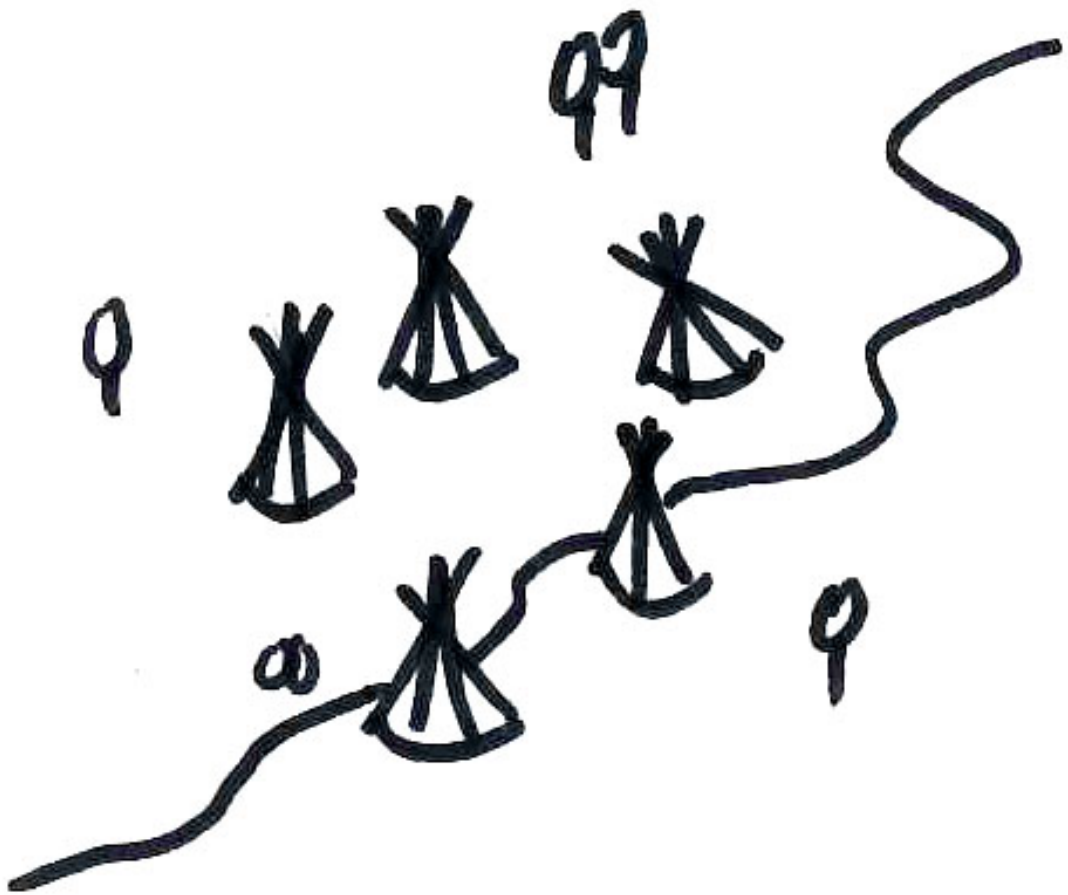

What kind of dwellings do the People in your land build?

Do they have many dwellings for small family groups, or larger structures that house many?

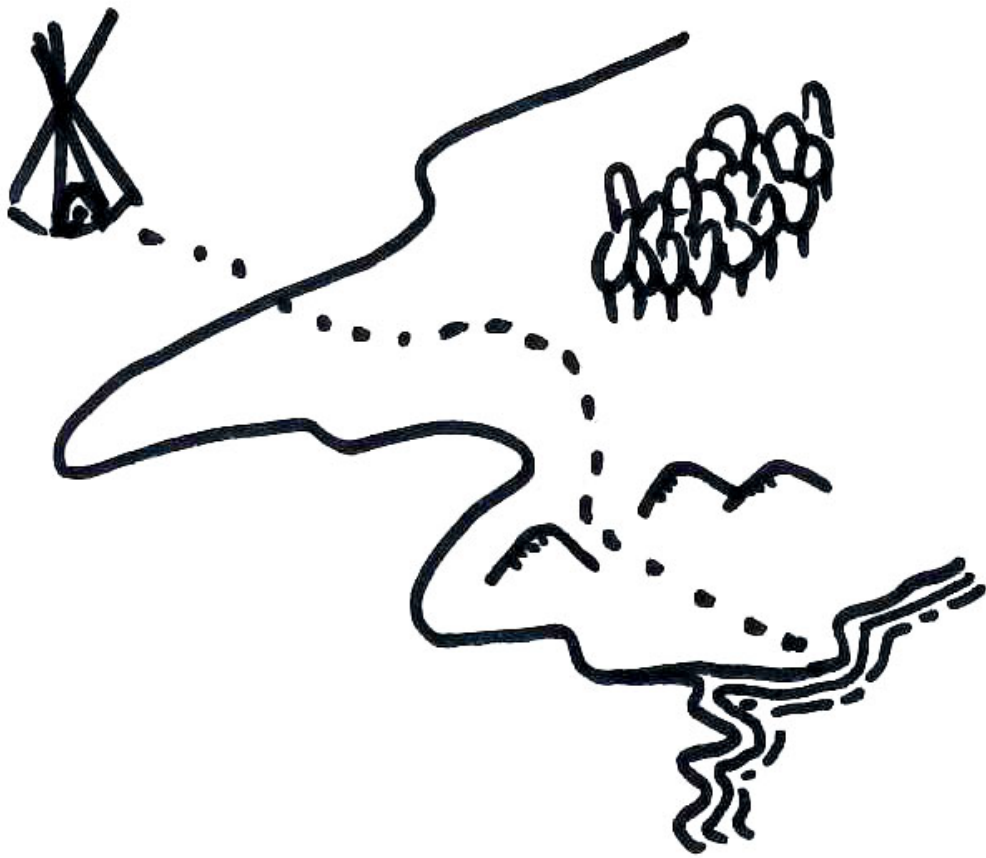

Decide where on your map the People have made their main village.
Draw enough dwellings there to house about twenty of the People.

Add a few other dwellings in other places around the map, enough to house another ten or so.

Think about where the People need to go to gather food, water and other things.

Make some paths so the People can move between important areas.

Draw dots or other small shapes to represent each of the People.

Some may be near the dwellings, others may be out doing things around the map.

How else have the People left their mark on the land?
